An internationally recognized arts institution with deep roots in the San Francisco Bay Area, the UC Berkeley Art Museum and Pacific Film Archive (BAMPFA) presents more than two dozen art exhibitions, 450 film screenings, and hundreds of public programs annually. With its vibrant and eclectic programming and a global collection that dates from 3000 BCE to the present, BAMPFA inspires the imagination and ignites critical dialog through art, film, and other forms of creative expression. BAMPFA is known for its outstanding collections of Ming and Qing dynasty Chinese painting, Abstract Expressionist painting, Conceptual art, and its groundbreaking MATRIX Program for Contemporary Art.

The film archive includes particular strengths in West Coast avant-garde cinema, video art, Soviet Cinema, and the largest collection of Japanese cinema outside of Japan. Films screen Wednesday through Sundays, often accompanied by the filmmakers and other experts in person. A lively schedule of public programming features more than 200 talks, tours, lectures, workshops, and performance events annually, most of which are free for members.

Reciprocal members also receive a discount at Babette, BAMPFA's delightful cafe overlooking the galleries, and the BAMPFA Store*, with its expertly curated selection of books, cards, jewelry, and other items, many by local artisans. BAMPFA's home in the heart of downtown Berkeley is accessible by public transportation (BART or AC Transit) and metered parking is available throughout the area.

* BAMPFA Store discount available only on select weekends during the year. For more information, call (510) 642-5186.

Inspired by the natural setting and artistic life of Long Island's East End, the Parrish Art Museum illuminates the creative process and how art and artists transform our experiences and understanding of the world and how we live in it.

The Parrish Art Museum is the oldest cultural institution on the East End of Long Island, situated within one of the most concentrated creative communities in the United States. Founded in 1898 by Samuel L. Parrish in the Village of Southampton, the Museum opened its new facility in Water Mill in 2012, designed by the internationally renowned architects Herzog & de Meuron. This state-of-the-art building has provided the Museum with new opportunities to expand its services in research, interpretation, collaboration, education, and interactive, multidisciplinary programming. With more than 12,000 square feet of gallery space, the Parrish presents its permanent collection—refreshed with new thematic installations annually—at the same time as a dynamic series of changing exhibitions. The Museum engages in research and interpretation of the more than 3,000 objects in its permanent collection through annual installations and publications; presents multiple special exhibitions per year with accompanying catalogues, many of which travel nationally and internationally; presents over 100 films, lectures, and performances annually; and offers a full range of education programs for all ages, including the region's school.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF CANADA

380 Sussex Drive

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada K1N 9N4

613-990-1985 | www.gallery.ca

When the National Gallery of Canada was established in 1880, its collection consisted of a single 19th-century landscape. Nearly 140 years later, the Gallery is home to more than 75,000 works of art, along with extensive library and archival holdings. Comprising works from antiquity to the present day, the Gallery has one of the finest collections of Canadian and Indigenous art in the world, as well as masterworks from numerous other artistic traditions.

In addition to showcasing works of art, the Gallery preserves, studies and shares works in every conceivable medium, including photography, sculpture, painting, installation and the decorative arts. It does this through conventional means such as exhibitions and publications, as well as through its website, social media channels and other forms of international outreach.

Housed in one of Canada's most iconic public buildings, the National Gallery of Canada is among the world's most respected art institutions. As part of its ongoing evolution, and in response to the changing expectations of museumgoers, the Gallery recently renewed its entire narrative on Canadian and Indigenous art, sharing a new and compelling story of artistic production in this country, from time immemorial to the present day.

While remaining committed to core values that include tradition, outreach and the sharing of knowledge, the National Gallery remains ever-alert to new ways of connecting with audiences, while showcasing the importance of art to the human condition — now and for generations to come.
